

Jeremy Denk

Sunday, March 13, 2022

2021-22

Orchestra & Chamber Music Series

GOGUE
PERFORMING ARTS
CENTER

AT AUBURN UNIVERSITY

UPCOMING 2021-22 PERFORMANCES

MARCH

Alfredo Rodríguez & Pedrito Martínez
Friday, March 18 • 7:30 p.m.
Woltosz Theatre

BalletX: *The Little Prince
Saturday, March 26 • 7:30 p.m.
Woltosz Theatre

An Evening with Kenny G®
Tuesday, March 29 • 7:30 p.m.
Woltosz Theatre

APRIL

The Righteous Brothers:
Bill Medley & Bucky Heard
Saturday, April 23 • 7:30 p.m.
Woltosz Theatre

Lauren Patten
Sunday, April 24 • 7:30 p.m.
Woltosz Theatre

MAY

Air Play* by Acrobuffos
Friday, May 13 • 7:30 p.m.
Woltosz Theatre

Rodgers & Hammerstein's OKLAHOMA!
Tuesday, May 17 • 7:30 p.m.
Wednesday, May 18 • 7:30 p.m.
Thursday, May 19 • 7:30 p.m.
Woltosz Theatre

Anastasia
Tuesday, May 31 • 7:30 p.m.
Wednesday, June 1 • 7:30 p.m.
Woltosz Theatre

• Add-on Performance

Tickets to add-on performances are not included with subscription packages and must be purchased separately.

PHOTOS (left to right, top to bottom):
Alfredo Rodríguez & Pedrito Martínez,
Air Play by Acrobuffos, Lauren Patten,
The Righteous Brothers, Anastasia,
BalletX: The Little Prince

Tickets available now!

334.844.TIXS (8497)
GOGUECENTERTICKETS.AUBURN.EDU

THE JAY AND SUSIE GOGUE PERFORMING ARTS CENTER
AT AUBURN UNIVERSITY

presents

Jeremy Denk

---

Sunday, March 13, 2022

2 p.m.

Walter Stanley and Virginia Katharyne Evans
Woltosz Theatre

Our thanks to the Auburn Chamber Music Society for their decades of commitment to chamber music in Auburn and their collaborative support of our inaugural season and beyond.

PROGRAM

---

Well-Tempered Clavier, Book 1 (1722)

Johann Sebastian Bach

(1685–1750)

- No. 1: Prelude and Fugue in C Major, BWV 846
- No. 2: Prelude and Fugue in C Minor, BWV 847
- No. 3: Prelude and Fugue in C♯ Major, BWV 848
- No. 4: Prelude and Fugue in C♯ Minor, BWV 849
- No. 5: Prelude and Fugue in D Major, BWV 850
- No. 6: Prelude and Fugue in D Minor, BWV 851
- No. 7: Prelude and Fugue in E♭ Major, BWV 852
- No. 8: Prelude in E♭ Minor and Fugue in D♯ Minor, BWV 853
- No. 9: Prelude and Fugue in E Major, BWV 854
- No. 10: Prelude and Fugue in E Minor, BWV 855
- No. 11: Prelude and Fugue in F Major, BWV 856
- No. 12: Prelude and Fugue in F Minor, BWV 857

---

INTERMISSION

---

- No. 13: Prelude and Fugue in F♯ Major, BWV 858
- No. 14: Prelude and Fugue in F♯ Minor, BWV 859
- No. 15: Prelude and Fugue in G Major, BWV 860
- No. 16: Prelude and Fugue in G Minor, BWV 861
- No. 17: Prelude and Fugue in A♭ Major, BWV 862
- No. 18: Prelude and Fugue in G♯ Minor, BWV 863
- No. 19: Prelude and Fugue in A Major, BWV 864
- No. 20: Prelude and Fugue in A Minor, BWV 865
- No. 21: Prelude and Fugue in B♭ Major, BWV 866
- No. 22: Prelude and Fugue in B♭ Minor, BWV 867
- No. 23: Prelude and Fugue in B Major, BWV 868
- No. 24: Prelude and Fugue in B Minor, BWV 869

PROGRAM NOTES

---

My first encounter with Bach's Well-Tempered Clavier was Barbra Streisand's A Christmas Album, which included Gounod's version of the first Prelude—the "Ave Maria." I was four or five. My father remarked to my mother that it sounded like Barbra was "on coke," which I assumed was soda, and that the Latin pronunciation left something to be desired. And yet I loved it, especially the way Barbra gathered intensity towards the end, riding the waves of her handy backup chorus (it would be nice to have one of those as a solo pianist, from time to time), and then belting out what I later learned in music theory was called a "cadential six-four chord"—it seemed like Bach was a channel for the most incredible, soaring leaps and desires.

Alas, soon enough I came to know the Well-Tempered Clavier like all other pianists: as a requirement for auditions, or a qualifying round for competitions. Bach is a great, quick way to judge a pianist's finger independence, structure and dexterity. But this gatekeeper role is a disservice, worse than Gounod's kitsch. It reinforces a pedantic stereotype and creates an aura of fear.

Writing a program note for this landmark of music is like blurbing the Bible. Where do you start? With the vast text or its vast influence? No matter what you say, you're going to get in trouble with someone. And explaining this music involves a lot of lingo: "fugue," "invertible counterpoint," "stretto." Readers who know the jargon will be bored by explanation, and readers who don't will be overwhelmed and turned off.

Perhaps best to start, then, with simple facts: Book One is 24 preludes and fugues, a pair in every major and minor key. To me this procession of pairs suggests the animals filing onto Noah's ark: two of every species, a way to reconstitute musical life, should everything vanish. It was published in 1722, nearly 300 years ago. Its declared purpose was to be a helpful collection of teaching pieces. I'd argue it's the most generous, rhapsodic, genial, heartbreaking set of lessons ever created.

In the classes I remember most fondly from high school and college, my teachers would start with a principle, or an idea: transcendentalism, parabolas, symbolism. Having established the idea, they'd move to examples: for instance, how Wallace Stevens' "The Emperor of Ice Cream" was an allegory for the ephemerality of appearances. The idea acquires a life and a purpose. This pedagogical move—from a principle to its instances, to its consequences and manifestations—is one of the most fundamental acts of the Well-Tempered Clavier. We begin with a thought, and end with a world. At the opening of each individual piece, you find an idea, an emotion, a gesture, a texture. It is then taken (in the next one-to-three minutes, rarely more) to what you might call a logical conclusion. But sometimes the logical appears wildly illogical: the dogged, repeated, machine-like rhythm of the C minor prelude erupts into a changeable improvisation; what we thought was the melancholy accompaniment of the E minor prelude turns into an obsession for both hands, a near-rage, while the melody vanishes. Often, the consequences dwarf the original idea, like in the C major prelude, where initially framed, demure seventh chords become instruments of unbelievable tension. Ideas are not static; they want to grow.

I suppose there's no avoiding a brief explanation of a fugue. Fugues are an interesting combination of strict and open-ended. Their beginnings are prescribed but their evolutions are not. They start with one voice alone stating a musical idea, which then appears in a second, third or fourth (even fifth) voice. Once all voices have entered, the fugue enters a freer phase. The world is its oyster. The theme may appear in any voice, right side up or upside down or backwards or elongated, or we may slide into an "episode," a temporary reprieve, a contrasting idea. The theme may interrupt and overlap itself too ("stretto"), in a surge of excitement or self-reinforcement. We can move from key to key, draping our idea in a rainbow of colors. The one thing you cannot do is leave the theme altogether, for too long; fugues, like marriages, require a reasonably high percentage of fidelity.

I like to think of fugues as mini lives, beginning with an act of birth: they appear to generate themselves, through spontaneous self-reproduction. After youthful exposition, with the texture complete, they enter middle age. The music acquires a wanderlust: a need to change key, venture forth to unexpected nodes. As a fugue approaches old age, it begins inevitably to retrace its steps: one last emphatic statement, or a thrilling stretto, or a striking or moving arrangement of voices. Bach has great creativity for these sites of return and fulfillment: never quite the same, always adapted to the idea. Sometimes, as in the G major fugue, there is the feeling of a mini apotheosis, reprising the theme like a joyful chorus; sometimes, as in the B minor and F minor fugues, you just hear the same unsettling enigma, one last haunting time.

The main melodies of fugues are called “subjects.” Bach’s subjects are lessons in their own right, and objects for meditation. They teach both construction and catchiness (you might say, virality). To be a good subject, the idea must be able to survive a great deal of repetition but also propel events forward. It must have inevitability, and a clear, vivid identity, so it can be recognized in the middle of all the counterpoint. Last but not least, it must have something to say.

Several of the catchiest Well-Tempered fugue subjects feature what I like to call a philosophical two-step: a question, followed by a somewhat unexpected answer. The G minor fugue gives you a stern minor descent, followed by a graceful, even dancing reply. The A minor fugue theme stops in its middle on a savagely dissonant leap, then returns with a flurry of close notes. Within the single subject, you find opposition, dialectic, a seesaw of parts, each food for future thought.

But there are great single-part subjects, too. The five notes of the C# minor fugue subject, for instance, begin and end on the same pitch, with unsettling intervals in between. We depart, but must always return; Bach deploys this fatefulness to incredible effect. The quite different A-flat major fugue simply ascends through the A-flat major chord, finds a beautiful high neighboring note (F), then slips back down to the main chord. That’s it! Its gesture is aspiration, and the message is in part the purity of the harmonies; only one note is dissonant (but not really or darkly dissonant).

Some themes are iconoclasts. The A major fugue begins with a single short note—an obvious joke, as if the piece ends the moment it begins. The E major fugue starts with just a pair of notes, stops short, and then starts running off as if being pursued. The F# minor fugue begins with just a bit of ascending scale; it waits; then it ascends a bit more, and waits; at last, it climbs one more note, and falls. It’s not exactly right to call this a “melody,” so much as a scale performed by a cautious turtle, painfully slow, waiting at each juncture to see what will happen. These pauses leave room for other sighing, falling ideas to intervene as the fugue goes on. Ascents play against descents; musical reflection becomes emotional reflection.

There are verbose subjects, concise subjects, unknowable enigmas, and all-too-obvious dances—like the C minor and C# major. They all make us think about the simplest relationships between notes of the scale, and what those notes might finally mean, in terms of chords—we try to interpret them, while Bach reveals the solutions.

I am in danger of neglecting the Preludes. They are a motley and yet incredibly friendly assortment: virtuoso pieces, melancholy ruminations, studies and curiosities. The first pair, the C major and C minor, are iconic chord studies. They begin with no changes of rhythm, and no overt melody, but a stream of continuous notes. It reminds me of when my mother would take everything off my plate, except for the broccoli. You’re going to listen to the harmony, Bach seems to say, whether you like it or not. But by the last Prelude, the B minor, you are at the opposite pole, with a texture made of three melodies: two duetting, lamenting voices up top, in an endless interweaving of yearning and dissonance, and a walking bass down below—even the harmonies have been melodized.

The Preludes largely explore the joys of the miniature: pieces that are over, almost, before they begin. I am reminded of pieces Schumann composed a hundred and fifteen years later, of fragments that reinvent themselves. In the B-flat Major Prelude, for instance, we begin with the sheer virtuosity of fast notes, a moto perpetuo. Halfway through, however, chunky chords bring the manic motion to a halt. From then on, fast fingers and fat chords are in perpetual war. There is a wit to these vast contrasts in small spaces, and also a sense that the moment Bach tires of an idea, he moves on (a freedom not permitted in a fugue). In his book Testaments Betrayed, Milan Kundera describes the pitfalls of big classical pieces and novels as “a collaboration between an eagle and hundreds of heroic spiders spinning webs to cover all the crannies.” He talks about the boring but necessary moments where composers (and writers) have to develop or modulate to get back to the desired outcome. But in these Preludes, it’s all eagles, no spiders—composition as flight.

One of my favorite Preludes is the E major, which begins as a seemingly straightforward pastoral. As Andras Schiff points out, you can hear the shepherd’s pipe, and the “sheep safely graze.” But some measures in, the left hand interjects a flat note, a musical cloud. It is reflected in the right hand, like a cloud is reflected in a lake. With that one gesture, the idyll acquires loss, and the picture takes on depth. The poetic pastoral addresses the play between the beauty of nature and the inevitability of loss and death—and it’s all there, held in suspension in that minute of music, a miniature world. It vanishes, and we go on to the next world.

This Prelude exemplifies one of the Well-Tempered Clavier’s most important themes: the complicated doorway between major and minor. It’s important to remind ourselves of the larger sweep of European classical music history. The major/minor classification of musical keys was relatively new. Previously, composers worked in church modes—there were as many as seven—where what we have come to know as major and minor are mixed. By Bach’s juncture in time, common practice has become more condensed, and more polarized (both a gain and a loss, depending on your point of view). Within every prelude and every fugue, Bach allows major and minor to visit each other. We cross and recross the boundary, an act with myriad metaphorical overtones: light meets dark, extrovert becomes introvert, joy gives way to sorrow, et cetera, et cetera. These moments of turning are for me the core of the Well-Tempered Clavier. They give the feeling of a fabric, reversible, invertible, turned inside out and back like a Möbius strip, an unending emotional richness. It is beautiful that Bach belies the premise of his own masterpiece. On the page he divides the world into major and minor. But in the music, he murmurs to us: no, it’s always both.

—Jeremy Denk, March 2022

THE JAY AND SUSIE GOGUE PERFORMING ARTS CENTER
AT AUBURN UNIVERSITY

presents

RODGERS & HAMMERSTEIN'S
OKLAHOMA!

THREE PERFORMANCES

Tuesday, May 17 • 7:30 p.m.
Wednesday, May 18 • 7:30 p.m.
Thursday, May 19 • 7:30 p.m.
Woltosz Theatre

GOGUE
PERFORMING ARTS
CENTER
AT AUBURN UNIVERSITY

Tickets available now!

334.844.TIXS (8497)

GOGUECENTER.AUBURN.EDU

Annual Sponsors

---

PLATINUM

GOLD

SILVER

BRONZE

*Paula & Mike Arasin • Laura & Kerry Bradley • Steve & Susan Campbell
Crit & Mary DeMent • Donna & Tony DiSclafani • The Elizabeth Grant Family
Dorsey Hannahan • Jim & Susan McKee • Dr. & Mrs. David Paradise
Linda Bonds Peterson • Diane & Darryl Rosser • Carolyn & Richard Salanitri
Rick N. White • Karen & Mitch Wood*

CELEBRITY

*Becky Thorne Carroll • Nancy & Billy Cleveland • Walt & Alicia Conn
Susie & Jay Gogue • Susan & David Housel • Jon & Rachel Hyink
Linda & John Mengelt • Bryan & Karen Ray
Beth & Rick Stukes • The Schneller Family*

PRESENTER

Auburn Research and Technology Foundation • Susan and James Bannon • Behind the Glass
Timothy and Marcia Boosinger • Harris and Beverly Brady • Tricia and Chad Gibbs
John and Heather Hardin • Hearing Professionals of Alabama • Hill Research Consultants (David and Sue Hill)
JP Morgan Chase and Co. • Drs. Arthur Avery and Leanne Lamke • Dr. David McClary • Vera Ellen McClure
Justin and Gethyn Phillipott • Rabren General Contractors • Michelle and John Reed
Samuel Ginn College of Engineering at Auburn University • Dr. Deborah Shaw • Samia Spencer
Tommy and Gloria Standard • Keith and Ashleigh Thompson • Peggy and Earnest Todd • Teresa and Floyd Vest
J. Austin and Linda Wade • Bill and Sarah Walls • Travis and Amanda Wisdom • Biff and Ellen Woodruff

PRODUCER

Sue Barry • Allen Beard and Molly Miller-Beard • Alice and Charles Bell • Mr. Alverson and Mr. Benefield
John and Marlene Bowman • Leslie and Jon Brasher (Ovante) • Carolyn and Jack Burkhalter • Kyle and Pallie Butler
Effie and Lewis Cannon • Chirpwood • Carol Clemmons • Ron and Sharon Coppock • Nancy and Grant Davis
Julie and David DeBaets • Jan Dempsey • Patty and Jim Disque • Ashley and James Durham
Tyler and Trent Globetti • Donny and Lil Goodwin • Bruce and Marie Hall • Jeff and Glenda Harris • Janet M. Hill
Tim and Tricia Hill • Mr. and Mrs. James R. Himmelwright • Kevin and Alan Hinds • Andee and David Hodo
Charlotte and Richard Hoerlein • Judy and John Ireland • Jana and Jonathan Jager • Bev and Dave King
Merry and Mark Ledbetter • Alice Johnson Mallory • Dennis and Jan Marple • Gerald and Donna Mattson
Patrick and Cynthia McCarty • Machen McChesney • Craig and Julie Melton • Barbara and Brasher Miller
Dr. Phillip Anthony Moore • Jerry and Marjorie Jockisch Newman • Paul and Louisa Patterson
Dr. David L. Martin and Dr. Catherine Perricone • Keith and Donna Phillips • CAPT and Mrs. Dennis Pinkard, USN
John E. Richardson, O.D. • Jim and Glenda Rose • Drs. Patricia Rynders and Michael Tillson
Drs. Stephen Schmidt and Margaret Craig-Schmidt • Steve and Judy Scully • Rob and Susan Selby
David M. George and Jana L. Smith • Dr. Thomas R. and Gayle Smith • Melanie and John Smyth
Southeastern Industrial Contractors, LLC • Chris Spraggins • Terri and Sibley Turner • Myrna Walker
Mike and Cindy Watson • Dr. West and Mr. West • Tom and Shani White • Bobby and Fredressa Whittenburg
Drs. Michael and Patricia Williams • Lauren and Ginny Wolfe • Dr. Ralph and Carol Womer
Lynn and John Woodham • Pam and Drew Yantis

BENEFACTOR

Crystal and Vernon Allison • Margaret and Tim Arnold • John S. Kush and Rebecca J. Barlow • Susan and Bill Black
Tamara Louise Callier • Russell and Rhonda Cattlely • Dr. Alfred Ray Cavender • Dr. Dorothy H. Cavender
Charles and Joy Clark • Karen and Bob Cochran • James P. Cook • Cathy and Davis Cooper • Joe Dalton
Jim and Barbara Dunham • Eric Ellis • Stewart and Susan Haines • Sue and Harry Hooper • Lee Alice Johnson
Donna and Ben Kelly • Jodie and Michael Kenney • Gabriel Lopez Low • Catherine M. Lowder
Edward and Nancy Morrison • David and Mary Nordness • Drs. Lane and William Sauser
Jennifer and Aaron Schmidt • Dave and Laurie Schobelock • Joanne and Paul Schrantz
Mary Catherine and Auston Shaw • James and Kelley Taylor • Mr. and Mrs. Mark Tuggle
Liesel and Michael Wesson • Cathy and Steve Wright

ASSOCIATE

Ayesha and Asim Ali • Karen and James Anderson • Cindy Arshad • Kay and David Autry
Dr. Jan and Shirley Bartels • Tim and Cindy Beasley • Craig and Anna Bertolet • Dr. and Mrs. Bill Brawner
Sue and Gary Brewis • Herb Brinkerhoff • Fred D. Brock • Mr. and Mrs. Michael Bumgardner
Katherine and David Burch • Drs. Matthew and Nicole Carter • Dennis Drake • Ernest and Elizabeth Edgar
Pat Evans • GNC at Tiger Town • Anne Blue and Scott Harvey • Denise Haynes • Sam and Mary Ellen Hendrix
Calvin and Mary Johnson • Dawn and Joel Jones • Lisa and Michael Kensler • Susan and Tom Lines
Curtis M. Locklin • Annette D. Lovett • MAC Animal Clinic • Don and Jane Machen • Anthony and Diane Nix
John Norton • Laneel Owens • Dana and Michael Parmer • Michael and Beth Price • Ken and Joyce Ringer
Linda Cain Ruth • Janice Ryan • Cynthia and Lyn Scarbrough • Kevin and Emmy Sorrells • Tommy and Frankie Stone
Dan and Melinda Surry • David and Barbara Swanger • Fudd Graham and Patty Tyler • Unconfusing Technologies
Laura and Herbert Weaver • Rick and Judy Wilhite • Ann and Chuck Williams • Hugh and Kathi Wilson
Constance and Don Wood • Julia and Mark Wood • Keven and Elizabeth Yost

FRIEND

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Akins • Anonymous • Lakami Baker • Richard and Tracey Barber • Diana and Sarge Bilgili
Stacey and David Blerish • Christen and Benjamin Bromberg • Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Brown • Melanie Cadenhead
Kelly and Leslie Carter • Stacy and Neil Chase • Cora and Brian Connelly • Sharon and William Crew
Lynn and David Dorough • Jen Duté • Kimble Eastman • Barbara and David Fussell • Jennifer Kate Gibson
Tom and Kelly Glanton • Misty Glazier • Robert and Tina Gottesman • Sybil and Charles Gross • Dan and Judy Guin
Jean and Ambers Hanson • Danielle and Nicholas Hayes • Lissa and Rod Hines • Sandi and Marc Huber
Beverly and Jay Jennings • Jon Jensen • The Kellar Family • Greg Kloeppe • John and Susan Kokoszka
Molly Lee • Cathy and Vance Mason • Susan McBride • Libba and Kenneth McMillan • Jennifer and Steven Moore
Dr. Gretchen Oliver • Sharon Patterson • Mr. and Mrs. James (Jim) P. Scarbrough • Prince and Neal Scott
Kristina Shuler • Fred and Patti Steagall • Sherri and Larry Varndadore • Rene and Mike Waldrop • Carol Warfield
Sam and Juile Woods • Glen and Chery Williams

THE JAY AND SUSIE GOGUE PERFORMING ARTS CENTER
AT AUBURN UNIVERSITY

presents

Journey to the past.

ANASTASIA

THE NEW BROADWAY MUSICAL

TWO PERFORMANCES

Tuesday, May 31 • 7:30 p.m.

Wednesday, June 1 • 7:30 p.m.

Woltosz Theatre

GOGUE
PERFORMING ARTS
CENTER

AT AUBURN UNIVERSITY

Tickets available now!

334.844.TIXS (8497)

GOGUECENTER.AUBURN.EDU

Annual Sponsor

---

GOGUECENTER.AUBURN.EDU

@AUGPAC

@GPACatAU

@AUGPAC